PREFACE.

The facts assembled in this small volume were gathered in part from publications which are not named because they are accessible to any searcher. Whenever these books seemed of doubtful accuracy or did not exist, the original town records were searched for vital statistics, land entries, settlements of estates and court proceedings. In several instances the records had been burned.

The alphabetical arrangement of families used with the two charts renders an index superfluous to those for whom the book is printed.

Few abbreviations occur :

abt. is about.

b., bp., m., d., are birth, baptism, marriage and death.

dau. is daughter.

per. is perhaps.

prob. is probably.

unm. is unmarried.

It was at first intended to include a biographical sketch of each male head of a family of the descendants of Williams Howe Whittemore and Ebenezer Clark, but for several reasons it was concluded to omit all.

I suggest that every copy be given to the nearest public library rather than destroyed.

 d. May 21, 1641.

He settled in Windsor, Ct., 1639, was Juror in Hartford, 1640-43, Oct., 1645, Mch., 1647, 1648, and was Deputy to the General Court, 1642.

He attended forty-six sessions of the General and Particular Court before the union of the New Haven and Connecticut Colonies, and served as Juror in all in twelve sessions of the Court in Hartford.

He was an enlisted trooper for Windsor in 1657-8 and "was confirmed by the General Court Quarter-Master of the County troop of Hartford Co. in May, 1677," (the first troop of horse in the Colony). He had a ferry across the Connecticut in 1640, of which he received in 1648-9 from the Colony of Connecticut a grant of a monopoly, and built a house on the East side in 1659. In 1662 he gave ferry and homestead to his son John, and with his son, Nathaniel, removed to below the mouth of the Scantic on the East side where his was the first and only family until 1675. During King Philip's war the house was fortified and garrisoned.

He and his sons, John Jr., Thomas and Nathaniel, were all free-men in Windsor by 1669.

His will of Sept. 25, 1673, pro. Hartford, Dec. 6, 1677, named sons John, Thomas, Samuel, Nathaniel; daus. Mary, wife of Jacob Drake, and Joyce, wife of Samuel Pinney. A codicil was of Apr. 6, 1677. Appraisal of Oct. 22, 1677. Inventory £521.

Note—It is probable that two generations preceded Hannah Emerson in this country, although destruction of records prohibits proofs. In the original vital statistic record in Newbury in which her marriage appears, she is plainly called Hannah. Coffin's History of Newbury copied it Hannah about 1829, and in 1845 called it Mary (perhaps thinking of the elder Wolcott's wife), and Savage followed and called her Mary, adding "Coffin tells no more."

Note—All of Ebenezer Howe's children, except Ebenezer, disappear from the Mass. records about 1753, and in Mansfield, Ashford and Willington, Ct., appear Samuel, Sarah, Charles, Benjamin and Nehemiah. That Samuel, Benjamin and Sarah were brothers and sister is proven by a diary of Doctor Samuel's daughter, Lucinda (Howe) Storrs, 1776-1780 and 1812 to her death at 81 in 1839, which I found after a search in N. Y., Ct., W. Va. and Vt., and induced the owner, Miss Harriet Waterman Storrs, now Mrs. Joseph Busby of Brooklyn, N. Y., to deposit in the Connecticut Historical Society Library. Rev. Eleazer Williams, 1688-1742, who in 1710 was ordained the first minister in Mansfield, was father of Mary, wife of Rev. Richard Salter, who was an aunt of Lucinda (Howe) Storrs and of her brother Williams Howe, who d. 1776. This doubtless accounts for the names of Rev. Williams Howe Whittemore and of his son.

Rev. Williams Howe Whittemore died at the residence of his second son, Edward P. Whittemore, in Rye, N. Y., July 25th, after an illness of a few hours, of paralysis of the heart.

Losing his mother at two years of age, he was cared for by his Aunt Roxanna at his grandfather Wales' until he was six, when he and his sister, Julia Ann, went to Belchertown, Mass., to live with Timothy Pearl, who had no children. He was there educated at the district school. When about 18 years old, during a remarkable revival of religion, he became converted. He was advised to study for the ministry. Mr. and Mrs. Pearl and others assisted him to prepare for college under his pastor and the Rev. Philo Judson (Y. C. 1809) of Ashford, Ct. He then taught the district school in Belchertown and attended the High School. He entered the class of 1825 in Yale College in the Sophomore year, and during the course taught in Washington and New Haven. After graduation he entered the Theological Seminary until the spring, when he taught classics in the High School in Newark, N. J., for a year, and then returned to the seminary. In 1828 he was licensed to preach and did so often during his last year at the seminary. May 1, 1829, he took temporary charge of the Presbyterian Church in Rye, N. Y., where he stayed three years where he married Maria the second daughter of Ebenezer and Ann (Marselis) Clark, by whom he had three sons and one daughter, all of whom, with eight grandsons and five granddaughters, were living at the time of his death. In the spring of 1832 he left Rye, and in the autumn took a church in Abington, Ct. In Aug., 1833, he was installed in Charlton, Mass., remaining until the spring of 1836. In the autumn he became pastor of the church in Southbury, Ct., where he remained until the autumn of 1850. Then until the autumn of 1851 he preached in Prospect, Ct. In Sept., 1851, he moved to New Haven, Ct., where he occupied himself with teaching two or three years, preaching constantly in various places, and from the spring of 1864 until Sept., 1865, acting as agent of the National Freedmen's Relief Association. In May, 1868, he went to Brooklyn, N. Y., to live with his daughter. From 1870 he was a member of the Church of the Pilgrims. Although more than 85 years old when he died he preserved to the last much physical and mental vigor. The last twenty years of his life were largely devoted to helping the poor and to literary pursuits, his interest in everything relating to the advancement of his fellow men remaining keen to the end.

(He m. 1st, Sept. 17, 1741, Elizabeth Miles, dau. of Thomas.)
He secured a divorce from his wife Abigail Dec. 4, 1770.

He was a sea captain and engaged largely and successfully in the shipping business. He built at the foot of the town hill the largest house in the township, forty feet square and three stories high.

His will of Aug. 16, 1774, probated New Haven, says "in 63d year of my age," divides estate into twenty-three parts, gives sons Daniel and Archibald (children of 1st wife) each ten parts, and Mary, Abigail and Ebenezer each one part. It mentions no wife, appoints sons Daniel and Archibald, executors, and names daughters Mary and Abigail, and son Ebenezer. Inventory (12-33) of Mch. 9, 1775, was £700. Court appointed July 5, 1775 (12-56), Abraham Stanley guardian for Abigail, and Archibald Clark for Ebenezer, Apr. 1, 1775 (12-42).

Court Record 16-174, July 25, 1788, Distribution, "of land to Archibald Clark 1st son, to Daniel Clark 2nd son, to Ebenezer Clark 3d son of Daniel Clark of Wallingford, and to daughters Mary wife of Ichabod Ives and to Abigail Buckman."

| HANNAH MARCELLIS | b. New York City, Mch. 5, 1769. | |
| | | d. Rye, Aug. 25, 1856. |

He removed in early manhood to New York, where the New York City directories of 1798 and 1802 call him "Coachmaker 202 Broadway"; of 1810 "Upper part of Broadway"; 1816, 1818, 1820 "Broadway North of Bleecker." He removed to Rye, May 10, 1821, where he built a house in 1836 opposite the Presbyterian Church.

His nuncupative will of 1847 was probated New York City.

"Died, at Rye, N. Y., Ebenezer Clark, aged 78 years, 8 months. Mr. Clark was made a subject of saving grace in this city about the year 1815, chiefly, as is supposed, under the faithful ministrations of Dr. McMurray. He united with the Franklin Street Dutch church, of which he was repeatedly solicited to become a ruling elder. In the year 1815 he took up his abode in Rye. Finding the cause of religion there in a very depressed condition, he got possession of an old, unfinished building, which had been erected for a church, and determined to "raise the tabernacle of David that was fallen." He procured an organization by the Presbytery of New York, although but ten communicants could be found in the neighborhood.

"The next year an opening was presented for a church in a village within the same township; he promptly undertook a building there and completed it. Some years after he removed the old edifice above referred to, and erected on its site a tasteful church, which is and will long remain, we trust, the ornament of the village, as well as the centre of saving influences.

"From the infancy of these two congregations until his death he watched over them with the tenderness and anxiety of a parent. In all their struggles, his strong hand supported and his sagacious counsels guided them. The large drafts made year by year upon his own moderate resources, were met with a rare liberality. Demands which would have startled many of our wealthy Christians, he cheerfully and promptly satisfied. He was actuated by a deep and all-controlling principle. Religion was the prominent business of his life. His sentiments on this and on other subjects he was never afraid or ashamed publicly to own. None of the inducements which were presented could persuade him to swerve from those high doctrinal principles, and that simple yet sublime form of worship which are the glory of our churches. His own household of faith, which he served as ruling elder, he supported with an earnest and an unwavering purpose. He has left behind him these two, now flourishing churches, as monuments of his character, which shall perpetuate his name and his principles far more efficiently and usefully than columns of granite towering to the heavens, or the shouts of a nation applauding a victorious general. His death as well as his life illustrated his principles. Humble and self-diffident, yet confident, the most lowly views of his own unworthiness were conjoined with the most exalted views of Christ's righteousness. He disclaimed all personal merit, and ascribed his salvation entirely to grace; yet this gave him a bright hope, undoubting assurance, and triumphant exit from this world."—N. Y. Observer.

The name Voorst is probably derived from a place in Gelderland, Holland, near the river Yssel, called Voorst. He came probably as early as Sept. 8, 1634, probably returned to Holland in 1635, was appointed by Michael Pauw Burgomaster of Amsterdam, and Lord of Achtienhoven, near Utrecht, to superintend his colony, and returned and settled in Pavonia before June 25, 1636. Michael Pauw bought Staten Island Aug. 10, 1630, and the land in New Jersey between Communipaw and Weehawken, Nov. 22, 1630, both from the Indians, and called it Pavonia, of which he was Patroon. June 25, 1636, Gov. Wouter Van Twiller, Dominie Everardus Bogardus and Captain DeVries called on Van Voorst and all drank freely. They entered their boat for Fort Amsterdam and Van Voorst fired a salute from a swivel mounted on a pile in front of the house—a spark lighted the thatched house and in a half hour the house was in ashes.

m. Oct. 18, 1652.

HILLETJE JANS of Oldenburgh in Holstein, d. July 18, 1705.

He is said to have been the first white male born and married in New Netherlands. In the war of 1643 he was captured by the Indians and a few days later ransomed. In the war of 1655 he took refuge in New Amsterdam.

In Oct., 1659, while dressing meat near his house, the Indians came and he fled with the meat in his row-boat to New Amsterdam, where he was fined 20 guilders and costs "for bringing meat to the city without taking out excise license." This was probably the first American tariff. Apr. 5, 1664, Gov. Stuyvesant gave him a home lot at Ahasimus, now Jersey City. He was a farmer and accumulated money and land.
